I support Wyoming DEQ's efforts to develop new rules under Wyoming Air Quality Standards and Regulations in order to reduce harmful methane emissions from oil and gas operations. Methane is a dangerous pollutant contributing to global warming and disastrous weather events. I recently returned from Florida having been stuck by Hurricane Milton which immediately followed Hurricane Helene. Our planet cannot continue to withstand these weather conditions significantly exacerbated by fossil fuel pollutants. There will be more fires and tornados in Wyoming with greater loss of life and property without needed changes like the ones proposed.
