

Noah Osnos

Simple enough: methane is a confirmed greenhouse gas, whose release into the atmosphere, whether by flaring or directly, is detrimental to the health of everyone, including Wyoming residents and their neighbors. As stewards of the environment and concerned community members, it behooves us to support measures to contain and restrain this harmful by-product of our resource extraction industries.