Wyoming is nowhere near the top contributor in any form of emissions. The only reference I could find where Wyoming was at or near the top? Per capita.. I hope I don't have to explain how that is, laughable at best, possibly fear mongering? This grand adaption should be far from our states current concerns. Among other reasons, I feel this could lay framework to a back door into regulating the agricultural branch of Wyoming. Which is concerning when that's how we feed ourselves and others. In a literal sense as well as monetarily. Wyoming is a travel through state with a lot of space. We shouldn't be donating it to federal cause. We need to start think about making and saving our own money, resources etc. We see how the federal programs are, "helping" those in need in the South right now. I may be the only one but look, I don't trust the decision making at the federal level right now. I think we should decide what's best for our state. .
