

Tony Hager

Wyoming does not need any more industry killing regulations on energy production. These regulations are not designed to protect our environment or stop waste, they are simply a Trojan horse to give more control over to government agencies to kill our jobs and energy sector. We don't need any more fake regulations on energy producers. If these concerns were real they would be trying to get the major polluters in our world like China and India to follow these regulations, but that is not even part of the conversation. We need less regulation and less influence from these fake environmental protection agencies.