

Cynthia Willson

First let me thank you for tackling wasteful and harmful methane emissions, petroleum chemicals and heavy metals, protecting Wyoming's clean air.

One's body shouldn't be identified by the harmful chemicals that were spewed into the air just because your address is Cheyenne, Wyoming, and not far from a refinery, or by your 82001 zip code. I've undergone medical tests over the years for numerous medical challenges. Doctors were surprised by high levels of petro-chemicals, heavy metals, arsenic, etc. until they learned I live in Cheyenne, Wy. I only had to say Cheyenne, Wyoming.

I was and am appalled that my state let me down! I have undergone long, arduous detox efforts at great personal expense.

Please let WY shed its previous reputation of allowing the oil and gas industries to pollute its citizens' health for their bigger profits (they pass on their expenses to their customers).

You may not see it, but if you can smell it, it is in your body, blood and lungs, and remains part of your physiology. It continues to affect your physical and mental health for the rest of your life! What's astounding is that it's wasteful, detrimental to the climate and affects others outside the State (bad neighbor) in a no win-no win situation!

Let's stop this immediately!!!

I applaud and thank everyone who is trying to right a horrible, harmful wrong of the past!!! Let's keep Wyoming the picture of its picture perfect beauty

Thank you!!! Cynthia Willson, Wyoming native of 78 years, and female wildlife photographer.
