

Tausha McDowell

Wyoming is noted for its natural beauty and resources, and as a resident I am proud to stand by that. I also believe as humans, we have a duty to care for this land as it is what sustains us. We must be ethical in our use of fossil fuels to preserve that beauty but also care for the creatures that inhabit it. These rules must be in place because history shows us time and time again that companies will not be responsible or ethical.